Hyun Kyo Park, MD

HISTORY:

This is a 30-year-old gravida 3, para 1, AB1, EDC of October 18th, was admitted to the emergency room with premature rupture of membrane in active phase of labor. On examination, she was 8 cm dilated. membrane was ruptured and she was in active phase of labor, so we decided to keep the patient and she was in labor in room 21 in the emergency room and fetal heart tone was obtained intermittently and she was contracting every 2 to 3 minutes, strong contraction. Blood pressure was stable, 110/70, and fetal heart tone was stable and amniotic fluid was clear. She was monitored for good 3 to 4 hours in active labor. She was dilated fully 2 hours after. She pushed more than 2 hours without any progress. At this point, we tried to transfer her to VMC or Stanford Medical Center which they would not accept her, so we decided to do a C-section for the diagnosis of CPD and I explained to the patient about procedure, risk, and complication to her and since there was some emergent situation, we took her to the ER operating room without consent taken, but we explained to her all the benefits and risk of procedure to the patient. The patient understood, and she had a baby girl. Baby weighed 3780 g, Apgars 7 and 9. C-section was done without any complication. She will be transferred to Valley Medical Center postop. Follow with the operative note.
